guaranteed hours Mondays 6-9 p.m.

Required Texts

“The Lively Art” (Seventh edition) Edwin Wilson and Alvin Goldfarb
Scripts: “Raisin in the Sun” Lorraine Hansberry “Hamlet” Shakespeare “Jill’s Gone”

Course Objectives

Drama 10 is divided into two basic courses of learning. Students will learn by being involved with the online classroom sections as well as keeping themselves updated with the required text, reading scripts listed above, observing video lessons from the professor and watching the required videos during the course. They are also are to be able to synthesize this knowledge, so that they can take a critical artistic look at works that will be observed through the time in this class.

We will look at theatre in the following perspectives:

1. What is Theatre? (Terminology, elements, artists involved, etc.)
2. How did it evolve? (Basic History and works)
3. What is theatre’s future? (Where is it going)?
4. What to expect from Theatre? (As an audience member)

Requirements

1. Collect the papers with the regular assignments each week
2. Read assigned text sections and plays and watch assigned videos.
3. Write at least three (3) critiques on performances of plays. You will be doing those critiques on the three videos that are available for you. They are “Hamlet”, “a Raisin in the Sun” and “Sweeney Todd”
4. Take the required quizzes, All Exams and Final Exam

Academic Honesty

It is expected that all work turned in by the student shall be their own. You may ask faculty, librarians and fellow students for assistance, but the final work and organization must be your own. A student will receive a failing grade if found guilty of academic dishonesty, in accordance with campus policy as described in the Catalog. Academic dishonest includes either cheating or plagiarism. Plagiarism is using someone else’s ideas or writings, or any part of their writing and then presenting their work as your own. An example would be using a sentence someone else has written in one of your critiques, but not giving them appropriate credit as the author. All scholars depend on the work of others, but they must always credit the originator of the idea, phrase or sentence.

Grading

The class will be using a 1000-point grading System		Max. Points
Critiques (3 Required-each max of 100 points)	300	(two must be live Performances)
Tests (Five in all...100 points each)		500
Quizzes 100
Class Participation		100
Total	1000

(Extra credit can be received with extra critiques...they will each have a maximum of 50 points. Sorry, only two extra critiques will be counted...but if you wish, a third extra critique could replace a lower percentage of one of the first three regular critiques.)
